Rotary Program: October 28, 2015

Program Chair: Darrell Maynard

Speaker: Renee Shaw, Public Affairs

Program Director—KET

Be a gift to the world

Renee Shaw was born in Portland, TN, and graduated from Western Kentucky University with a B.S. in political science and broadcast journalism and a M.A. in corporate communications. She began working with Kentucky Educational Television in 1997 hosting a program called "Connections With Renee Shaw" and is now hosting the longest running public affairs program, "Comment on KY." She is also the producer, managing editor and host of KET's legislative coverage.

Renee's presentation was a brief overview of the 2015 governor's race and upcoming election. As one of only three states electing a governor this year, it is a critical time for our state. She presented a video highlighting profiles of the Democratic candidate, Jack Conway and the Republican Matt Bevin and some of the coverage of last Monday's debate between the two candidates. There was also a short clip of an interview with each of them by "Kentucky Forum" host Bill Goodman.

Conway is from Louisville, growing up as the son of a politician, educated in Catholic Schools and has served as the state's Attorney General. Matt Bevin was born in Denver, Colorado and then moved to New Hampshire where he grew up on a farm with parents with strong Christian values. Here, he said, he learned from his father two important things about life: a good work ethic and the appreciation of receiving an honest day's pay for an honest day's work. Bill also gave each candidate one last opportunity to say something to the other. Bevin simply asked Conway to stop the lies in his campaign ads and said that everyone, including his own supporters are growing weary of his negative tone and dirty politics. Conway said that his campaign began by focusing on his record of accomplishments, until extravagant amounts of out-of-state money began flowing in turning the tone of the race into something that it was not. He accused Bevin of distorting his record on coal and other issues as well. When asked if they would like to say one thing of a positive nature, Bevin remarked that he looked forward to Conway joining the private sector. He also stated that he had not made great promises but to be a good steward of the state's money, to put big government out of business and return the office to the people.

Renee's final remarks bewailed the fact that only 12% of registers voters participated in the primary election and only 20 to 30% are expected to vote in the final election. With polls showing that 15% of voters are still undecided, it is really too close to call.

ROTARIAN's CODE OF CONDUCT

Thank you to Rotarian David Kruger for examples of how his Rotary Club participates in vocational service.

Taken from his email ... though not a continuous project, the club has been involved in a mentoring program at a local middle school. Just a chance to sit down with a youngster and discuss whatever comes to mind. An adult listens to a child. We also participate in a career day for middle school children. Members volunteer a morning of their time to chat with the youngster about the type of work they do, what it takes, amount of education...etc. These are great ways for Rotarians to make a difference in the lives of these children and provide vocational service at the same time.

Remember that our actions help demonstrate the Rotarian Code of Conduct

As a Rotarian, I will:

1. Act with integrity and high ethical standards in my personal and professional life
2. Deal fairly with others and treat them and their occupations with respect
3. Use my professional skills through Rotary to mentor young people, help those with special needs, and improve people's quality of life in my community and in the world
4. Avoid behavior that reflects adversely on Rotary or other Rotarians

Ray's Rib

My sister was told by her six-year-old son that his friend was in the play at school. She asked what his friend was in the play. Her son told her his friend was going to be a donut. She thought they must be doing a play on eating healthy or something.

A few days later, her eight-year-old son told her that the school was doing the play "The Wizard of Oz." After a few minutes she started laughing. His friend wasn't going to be a donut - he was going to be a munchkin!

Out bicycling one day with my eight-year-old granddaughter, Carolyn, I got a little wistful. "In ten years," I said, "you'll want to be with your friends and you won't go walking, biking, and swimming with me like you do now."

Carolyn shrugged. "In ten years you'll be too old to do all those things anyway."

Three nature lovers went for a drive into the mountains one day to see if they could spot some bears. They wanted to take pictures of bears for their photo album. So they drove along an old dirt road until they entered the trees. As they rounded a curve, they spotted a sign that read, "BEAR LEFT."

So they turned around and went home.

"I've just had the most awful time," said a boy to his friends. "First I got angina pectoris, then arteriosclerosis. Just as I was recovering, I got psoriasis. They gave me hypodermics, and to top it all, tonsillitis was followed by appendectomy."

"Wow! How did you pull through?" sympathized his friends.

"I don't know," the boy replied. "Toughest spelling test I ever had."

On a busy Friday night at the restaurant where I'd recently started waiting tables, the owner suddenly emerged from the kitchen and handed me money. "We're in trouble!" He said. "We're out of quarters, and customers are waiting. Go next door and get me $40 worth."

I ran to the supermarket next door, but a cashier said she wasn't allowed to give out that many quarters. Determined, I sprinted to a convenience store two blocks away, but it was closed. At a gas station farther down the road, the clerk took pity and gave me the four rolls of quarters. Twenty minutes after I'd left, I handed the coin rolls to my boss. "Where are the quarters?" He asked.

"Right here," I said breathlessly.

His face sank. "I meant chicken quarters."
